Service Building, Musgrave Street, Rockhampton

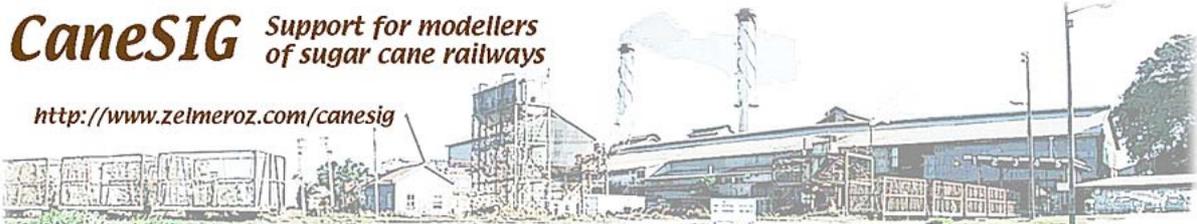

This building currently houses a Building Certifier but by its appearance could have been a petrol station, hardware store, or any other service business requiring both a display area and a garage/workshop.

While the building has an Art-Deco false front, the roof is a rectangular hip style at the back. The shed roof on the left side is presumably a more recent addition to the structure, as is the overhead garage door.

This would be an easy building to model, as is or backdated with timber garage doors, etc. Without the garage it would also make a shop or professional office for a street scene.

The depth of the building can be varied to suit the site but it would likely have had an exterior brick toilet block in its original form. Photographed 23 Aug 2008 © Lynn Zelmer.
